Hail wedded Love, myſterious Law, true Source

In Paradiſe of all Things common elſe!
By thee adulterous Luſt was driven from Men,

Milton.

AS Happineſs, in the married State, is a Matter of general Concern, we hope it may not be diſagreeable to any of our Readers, to give the following Eſſay on Love and Marriage. Glad ſhall we be, if it proves of any Service to either Sex, in the Choice of the Partner they deſign thus to be engaged with for Life. And as to thoſe who have got the whip-hand of us, and are already fixed, we no leſs hope, it may not be altogether an uſeful Leſſon even to them. And that, if they are ſo unhappy as to ſuſpect in themſelves, or each other, an Error in any of the agreeable Requiſites, here inſinuated, they may endeavour to correct it, in their future Conduct by Good-Nature and Prudence

The pleaſanteſt Part of a Man's Life is generally that which paſſes in Courtſhip, provided his Paſſion is ſincere, and the Party beloved, kind with Diſcretion. Love, Deſire, Hope, all the pleaſing Motions of the Soul riſe in the Purſuit.

It is eaſier for an artful Man, who is not in Love, to perſuade his Miſtreſs he has a Paſſion for her, and to ſucceed in his Purſuits, than for one who loves with the greateſt Violence. True Love hath ten Thouſand Griefs, Impatiencies and Reſentments, that render a Man unamiable in the Eyes of the Perſon whoſe Affection he ſolicits; beſides that, it ſinks his Figure, gives him Fears, Apprehenſions, and Poorneſs of Spirit, and often makes him appear ridiculous where he has a Mind to recommend himſelf.

Thoſe Marriages generally abound moſt with Love and Conſtancy, that are preceded by a long Courtſhip. The Paſſion ſhould ſtrike Root, and gather Strength before Marriage be graſted on it. A long Courſe of Hopes and Expectations fixes the Idea in our Minds, and habituates us to a Fondneſs of the Perſon beloved.

There is nothing of ſo great Importance to us, as the good Qualities of one to whom we join ourſelves for Life; they do not only make our preſent State agreeable, but often determine our Happineſs to all Eternity. Where the Choice is left to Friends, the chief Point under Conſideration is an Eſtate: Where the Parties chuſe for themſelves, their Thoughts turn moſt upon the Perſon. They have both their Reaſons. The firſt would procure many Conveniencies and Pleaſures of Life to the Party whoſe Intereſt they eſpouſe; and at the ſame Time may hope, that the Wealth of their Friend will turn to their own Credit and Advantage. The others are preparing for themſelves a perpetual Feaſt. A good Perſon does not only raiſe, but continue Love, and breeds a ſecret Pleaſure and Complacency in the Beholder, when the firſt Heats of Deſire are extinguiſhed. It puts the Wife or Husband in Countenance both among Friends and Strangers, and generally fills the Family with a healthy and beautiful Race of Children.

I ſhould prefer a Woman that is agreeable in my own Eye, and not deformed in that of the World, to a celebrated Beauty. If you marry one remarkably beautiful, you muſt have a violent Paſſion for her, or you have not the proper Taſte of her Charms; and if you have ſuch a Paſſion for her, it is Odds but it will be imbittered with Fears and Jealouſies.

Good-Nature, and Evenneſs of Temper, will give you an eaſy Companion for Life; Virtue and good Senſe, an agreeable Friend; Love and Conſtancy, a good Wife or Huſband. Where we meet one Perſon with all theſe Accompliſhments, we find a hundred without any one of them. The World, notwithſtanding, is more intent on all the ſhowy Part of Life; we love rather to dazzle the Multitude, than conſult our proper Intereſt; and ſure it is one of the moſt unaccountable Paſſions of human Nature, that we are at greater Pains to appear eaſy, than really to make ourſelves ſo. Of all Diſparities, that in Humour makes the moſt unhappy Marriages, yet ſcarce enters into our Thoughts at the contracting of them. Several that are in this Reſpect unequally yoked, and uneaſy for Life, with a Perſon of a particular Character, might have been pleaſed and happy with a contrary one, notwithſtanding they are both perhaps equally virtuous and laudable in their Kind.

Before Marriage we cannot be too inquiſitive and diſcerning in the Faults of the Perſon beloved, nor after it, too dim-ſighted and ſuperficial. However perfect and accompliſhed Perſons appear to you at a Diſtance, you will find many Blemiſhes and Imperfections in their Humour, upon a more intimate Acquaintance, which you never diſcovered, or perhaps ſuſpected.

Here therefore Diſcretion and Good-Nature are to ſhew their Strength; the Firſt will hinder your Thoughts from dwelling on what is diſagreeable, the other will raiſe in you all the Tenderneſs of Compaſſion and Humanity, and by Degrees ſoften thoſe very Imperfections into Beauties.

Marriage enlarges the Scene of our Happineſs and Miſeries. A Marriage of Love is pleaſant; a Marriage of Intereſt, eaſy; and a Marriage where both meet, happy. A happy Marriage has in it all the Pleaſures of Friendſhip, all the Enjoyments of Senſe and Reaſon, and indeed, all the Sweets of this Life. Nothing is a greater Mark of a degenerate and vicious Age, than the common Ridicule which paſſes on this State of Life. It is, indeed, only happy in thoſe, who can look down with Scorn or Neglect on the Impieties of the Times, and tread the Paths of Life together in a conſtant uniform Courſe of Virtue.

On little CLEORA.

SHE's little, but ſhe's wondrous pretty;
Has Wit, but is not wildly witty.
Good-Humour plays around her Face,
And Modeſty keeps equal Pace.
Such is our pretty little Woman,
With much that's rare, and nothing common.

The MILK-MAID.

IN the ſprightly Month of May,
When all ſmells ſweet, and looks ſo gay,
There tripp'd along a buxom Laſs,
With a Milk-Pail o'er the Graſs;
On ſhe went with nimble Tread,
The Pail ſtood ſteady on her Head;
Hoping ſtill to reach the Town,
Ere that Evening Sun went down;
And, for that Reaſon, to be freed
From whatſoe'er delay'd her Speed,
One ſingle Petticoat ſhe wore,
Half-way tuck'd up her Leg before;
With low-heel'd Shoes, to go the quicker,
To trip the leſs, and ſave her Liquor.
As thus ſhe paſs'd, within her Thought,
She fancy'd all the Milk was bought;
The Money her's, ſhe ſeem'd intent
How to improve it Cent per Cent.
She bought ſome Eggs, and ſet a Hen,
The Chicks ſhe hatch'd, and ſet again;
Already, in Imagination,
Sh' had Chicks enough to ſtock the Nation:
I can, ſaid ſhe, or ſure 'tis hard,
Bring up the Chicks about our Yard;
And harder ſtill if Fox and Dog
Don't leave enow to buy a Hog:
The Hog will ſure be fat, with Eaſe,
With half a Dozen Peck of Peaſe;
And then I'm very much miſtaken,
If I'm a Loſer by my Bacon;
But when that's ſold, it ſhan't be ſaid,
I let my Money lie by dead;
I'd better than do ſo by half,
E'en buy me with't a Cow and Calf;
And with ſmall Coſt I ſhall be able
To feed them both in our own Stable:
Beſides, 'twill paſs a rainy Day,
To ſee the little Wanton play;
To ſee it run about and skip.
With that, by Sympathy, ſhe gave a Leap;
Down comes the Milk, and with it fall
Cow, Calf, and Hog, and Eggs, and all;
She on the Ground, with mournful Eye,
Sees all her Hopes of Riches lie,
Her Fortune ſplit, and all her Schemes
Turn'd but into waking Dreams.
—— In nothing ſo much Joy we take,
As to ſit and dream awake.
The flatt'ring Error ſooths our Soul,
And ſtill it roves without controul:
Thus he, whoſe harpy Finger itches,
Still to be ſcraping up of Riches,
Can ne'er expreſs th' Exceſs of Pleaſure,
In brooding o'er a fancy'd Treaſure:
Another, more inclin'd to Love,
Forms in his Mind a ſhady Grove;
And, in that Grove, ſome Grotto where
He may enjoy his charming Fair;
Already, in his Fancy, traces
All her nameleſs Charms and Graces.
The Fair indulges firſt a Kiſs,
And then at laſt a nobler Bliſs.
Fancy, if thou ſuch Joys canſt give,
Ever fancying let me live;
But 'tis not ſo well with me,
For when I'm alone and free,
Ambition, Tyrant of my Days,
In gaudy Shapes before me plays.
Not many Days are vaniſh'd ſince
I thought myſelf ſome mighty Prince:
Methinks, ſaid I, they chuſe me King;
The Streets with Acclamations ring,
Whilſt the Bells from ev'ry Steeple
Proclaim my Honours to the People.
And, to compleat this golden Dream,
I thought me firſt in your Eſteem.
But whilſt, with juſteſt Moderation,
I was ruling thus my Nation,
Some curſed Noiſe, by accident,
The preſent Turn of Thought unbent;
And I remain'd, when this was o'er,
The ſelf-ſame Thing I was before.

SATURDAY, September 23.

YESTERDAY a Man on Horſeback coming over Finchley-Common, was attack'd by two Highwaymen, who demanded his Money; but he having more Courage than Conduct, knock'd one of them down; upon which the other fired his Piſtol at him, and the Man putting up his Hand to ſave his Head, the Bullets ſhattered it all to Pieces; and a few Hours after it was cut off by Mr. Hawkins, a Surgeon.

On Thurſday Evening two Chaiſes coming from Croydon-Fair (in one of which there were two Women, in the other a Man and a Woman) drawing one againſt the other, in turning the Corner by Newington Church, the Chaiſe which the two Women drove, ran againſt an elderly Gentleman on Horſeback, and puſh'd him off into the Ditch, and the Woman that drove, with the Violence, was thrown out herſelf, and the Chaiſe went over her, but neither received any Damage. The old Gentleman, when he was help'd out of the Ditch, inſtead of Paſſion, only cry'd out, Fooliſh, fooliſh, very fooliſh.

Yeſterday one Wood, who ſome Time ſince kept an Alehouſe in Hog-Lane, ſtood on the Pillory at the End of the ſaid Lane, by the French-Exchange, for uttering falſe Money.

Letters from Vienna, of September 13. N. S. ſay, That the Jews of Wurtzbourg have committed a barbarous Murder in a Village of the Bailywick of Sternberg, where five of their Tribe perſuaded a young Peaſant, of 21 Years of Age, to bring into the Wood a poor young Beggar of 11 Years, promiſing him a Recompence of 300 Crowns; the Peaſant having comply'd with, and the Jews having got the young Beggar into their Hands, they hung him upon a Tree by his Feet, cut his Belly in the Form of a Croſs, and ſcourg'd him afterwards in this Poſture to Death. The Peaſant having been ſeen to go out of the City in Company with the young Beggar, the Bailiff of Sternberg caus'd him to be taken up and ſtrictly examined, who denounc'd the five Jews guilty of this moſt execrable Murder; they were immediately ſeized, and tho' they offer'd him 10,000 Florins, he committed them to Priſon, and ſent them to Konigshoffen, where they undergo a rigorous Examination before the Commiſſioners deputed for that Purpoſe from Wurtzbourg. 'Tis ſaid that the Peaſant has been confronted with them, but that they perſiſt tenaciouſly in the Denial of the Commiſſion of that horrible Fact.

They alſo write from Bamberg, in Germany, that the Daughter of a Jew having received Baptiſm at the Engliſh Nuns in that City, a Relation of hers deſired alſo to become a Chriſtian; but the other Jews prevented the ſame, and caus'd him to be convey'd away to Bayerſtorff, and from thence further off: While he was thus conveying away, he acquainted every Body he could, that he was forced away againſt his Will, on Account of his being deſirous of receiving Chriſtian Baptiſm; which being reported to the Prince and Biſhop of that City, his Serene Highneſs withdrew his Protection from the Jews till they produc'd that Youth; which has put them under no ſmall Apprehenſion of being dealt with with more Severity, fifty Men patroling all Night long in that Part of the City where the Jews inhabit. But 'tis greatly feared the ſaid Youth is no more living, not being, after the cloſeſt Search, to be found any where.

On her Majeſty's Hermitage at Richmond.

O greatly Good! O! faireſt of your Kind!
Endu'd with ev'ry Virtue of the Mind.
Inſtructive Truth, and Goodneſs, are your Care,
Learning, by You, we find, becomes the Fair.
When from the World's great Bus'neſs you retreat,
To meditate in Richmond's happy Seat,
There wrapt in Thought, with Pleaſure you ſurvey
How thoſe good Men have conſcious trod the Way
Of diſregarded Truth: brave Souls! whoſe Aim
Was boldly to exalt Religion's Fame,
And make Mankind adore the Thing, and not the Name.
Ye Sons of Merit, view great CAROLINE,
In whom all liberal Arts united ſhine,
To gain her Grace with Emulation ſtrive,
Then after Death your Names ſhall ſtill ſurvive.
Could lifeleſs Marble ſpeak, or ſmile, they wou'd
Exult to view a Patroneſs ſo good,
With conſtant Echoes celebrate thy Praiſe,
And to thy Name a laſting Trophy raiſe.
With Time their marble Buſts ſhall fade away,
And Hills and Mountains haſten to decay;
But, CAROLINE! thy glorious Name ſhall laſt,
Till the ſhrill Trumpet ſounds the final Blaſt.

Yeſterday a Court of Huſtings was held at Guildhall, when Henry Hankey and Robert Aiſop, Eſqs; Sheriffs Elect for the Year enſuing, were ſworn and inducted into their Office with the uſual Ceremony; and the Keepers of Newgate and the two Compters deliver'd their Keys and a Liſt of their Priſoners, according to annual Cuſtom: Then the Court adjourn'd. Afterwards the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, in his Coach of State drawn by ſix Horſes, accompanied by the Aldermen, Recorder and Sheriffs, went to Kenſington to wait on his Majeſty, to congratulate him on his ſafe Arrival here, who was pleaſed to receive them ſtanding in Sir Thomas Hewet's Room, call'd the Venetian Chamber: Sir William Thompſon, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Recorder of London, made their Compliment, in an elegant Speech; to which his Majeſty was pleaſed to return a moſt gracious Anſwer; and they had ſeverally the Honour to kiſs his Hand. This Day John Barber, Eſq; was choſen Lord Mayor of the City of London, for the Year enſuing.

Laſt Tueſday Morning a Gentleman who liv'd at Hays near Bromley in Kent, poſſeſs'd of a plentiful Income, went to London, and after being return'd that Evening, went immediately into his Chamber and ſhot out his Brains; there did not appear in the leaſt any Diſcontent of Mind in his Behaviour.

Commitment. On Tueſday Night laſt a Man who keeps a Tallow-Chandler's Shop in Little Featherſtone-ſtreet in Bunhill-fields, and likewiſe goes out on Nights to work for others of the ſame Occupation, went to work at a Tallow-Chandler's on Saffron-Hill, where, between Twelve and One o'Clock, his Wife came, as ſuppos'd by Agreement, when he handed her out of the Cellar between 30 and 40lb. Weight of Tallow, which ſhe was going home with, but was ſtopt by Cripplegate Watch, who examining of her how ſhe came by it, in her Fright ſhe confeſs'd: They ſecur'd her and went directly and ſeiz'd her Husband, and rais'd the Maſter of the Houſe, who had them both, on Wedneſday Morning, before Sir Richard Brocas, who committed the Man to Newgate, and his Wife to the Compter.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Paris, Sept. 27. N. S.

IT appears by Letters from Rome, that the Proceſs of Cardinal Coſcia is drawing to an End. If one may judge of his Crimes by the Length of the Proceedings, by the Sums with which he has offer'd to buy himſelf off, or by the Complaints of the Roman People, then is he a Rogue of an enormous Size. And yet for all that, there is no Appearance that his Eminency will reach the Gallows. It rather looks as if it was deſigned only to make this Mitred Criminal, this Miniſterial Robber, compound for all his Felonies, and refund only Part of the great Wealth he has ſcraped together. If this ſhould be the Caſe, and after that he ſhould be abſolved, and his Conſcience ſcour'd clean, we may live to ſee Coſcia Sovereign Pontiff, and then he may go over his old Rogueries cum Privilegio. Let Coſcia poſſeſs himſelf once of the Keys, and what Thieves in Purple ſhall we be-Sold locked into the Sacred College! Marche-à terre may then be a Cardinal, and our Biſhops choſen out of the Charitable Corporation.

Here has been diſperſed in France, as well as in Holland, a Letter from the Chevalier Belloni at Rome to an Engliſh Lord, upon the Subject of a judicial Burning of a former Letter written by him to the Parliament of England. In this ſecond Letter, Signor Belloni compares the Affair of the Charitable Corporation and the Eſcape of Thompſon, to the Caſe of the Directors of the South Sea Company, and the Flight of the Caſhire, Knight. He inſinuates as if there was ſome Myſtery of Iniquity in both theſe Events, which he could reveal; but contents himſelf with juſtifying his own Conduct. He ſuggeſts ſome Suſpicions, indeed, which do no Honour to the Perſons they are applied to; yet he keeps his Pen to Terms of Civility and Good-Breeding. In ſhort, the Letter, as my Dutch Correſpondent words it, is very delicately, or if you will, very artificially written.

Paris, Sept. 26. N. S. The Parliament remain as they were, but the Great Chamber do not go on ſo cordially in their Buſineſs: They exerciſe the Functions of that of the Vacations in adminiſtring Juſtice in criminal Matters; but the expediting Proceſſes in the Civil Laws, and certain other Affairs, as is uſually practiſed during the autumnal Vacances, cannot be done, becauſe they have no Attorneys to plead. Theſe Gentlemen have taken it into their Heads to abſent themſelves from the Palais, as if they had a Mind to turn honeſt. However, the Declaration of Aug. 18, and the Edict for continuing the Impoſt of four Sols per Livre, have been printed by Conſent of the Chamber. Thus this Part of the Parliament ſeems willing to keep the Court Favour, by their Submiſſion to the Orders of the Government, though Meſſieurs Talon and Molé, Preſidents à Mortier, Deputies of the Chamber, have been at Fountainebleau, to beſeech the King to moderate his Rigour towards the exiled Members, and re eſtabliſh the antient Prerogatives of his Parliament; and ſo the Chamber intends to continue twice a Week to ſend the like Deputations to Court. The Council has iſſued an Arret with Letters Patents to Monſieur Herault to prepare a Proceſs againſt the Author of a Book called a Geneſes, in Latin and French, with a literal Explanation drawn from Scripture and Tradition. This Book (it ſeems) had paſſed the Royal Licence: But the Author is charged with making Falſifications and Alterations in the Manuſcript, as well in the Text as in the Marginal Notes, after the Permiſſion was ſigned. The Author not caring to abide by the Judgment of the Proceſs, is gone away without taking Leave. Monſieur Tellier, Canon of the Cathedral of Rheims, has publiſhed a Book which makes a great Show in the Bookſellers Shops: It is delicately printed, magnificently adorned, and richly bound. The Author has beſtowed Pains enough in his Argument to eſtabliſh the Royal Authority upon the Ruins of that of the Parliament. It ſeems, ſomebody from Court has whiſpered the Canon in the Ear, that theſe are the Labours from whence moſt Profit may be drawn, and that it alſo clears the Road to a Biſhoprick.

Naples, Sept. 9. On Saturday laſt the Daughter of Don Paul Caraffa, a beautiful young Lady, had the Misfortune to fall into a Well, and drown herſelf; ſhe was not above 14 Years of Age. They write from the further Calabria, that a Gentleman of that Province, having kill'd the Preſident of Corenza, whilſt he was doing the Functions of Judge, in open Court, then found Means to retire, and put himſelf at the Head of 700 Men in Arms, with whom he continues to commit great Diſorders in that Province. Upon Advice whereof the Government has ſent Orders to ſome regular Troops, to go and diſperſe the Robbers, and ſecure the Ringleader, if poſſible. The laſt Accounts from Meſſina mention an unlucky Accident which befel Colonel Lockſtat, who going with ſome German Officers to ſee the Caſtle of St. Sauveur, upon his Return, the Boat overſet, whereby the Colonel, with Capt. Deuri, and one Lieutenant, were unfortunately drowned in the Port. Two of our Gallies, the Capitane, and the Elizabeth, having lately met with three Corſaires of Barbary near Cape St. Mary, gave them a Broad-ſide, and purſued them for ſome Time; but the Corſaires, being good Sailors, eſcap'd.

Hanover, Sept. 26. 'Tis adviſed from Domitz, that the reigning Duke, Charles of Mecklembourg, has ſent to the Subdelegate Commiſſioners of Execution, an ample Proteſt againſt all the Regulations made by the Emperor, with Regard to the Affairs of Mecklembourg.
